Abstract

String matching is a problem where a pattern is to be searched within a text. In this paper, we study about selected string matching algorithms which compute shifts; based on good suffix rule and/or bad character rule or their variations. Algorithms are compared on the basis of their execution time for different data sets; those differ on patterns and alphabet sizes. Finally, we present a summary for the selection of these algorithms in different applications, based on the experimental results obtained.

References

255-300, Elsevier, Amsterdam.
   Algorithms, ed. A. Apostolico and Z. Galil, Chapter 1, pp 1-53, Oxford University Press.
   Practice & Experience 21(10):1065-1074.
6. Horspool R.N., 1980, Practical fast searching in strings, Software - Practice & Experience,
7. Sunday D.M., 1990, a very fast substring search algorithm, Communications of the ACM.
   33(8):132-142
8. The SMART tool used for execution of algorithms can be found at:
   http://www.dmi.unict.it/~faro/smart/.

Index Terms

Computer Science  Algorithms

Keywords

Good Suffix Rule, Bad Character Rule, Boyer Moore Variations, String Matching Problem, Performance Analysis.