Abstract

Use of information systems and information technology is always gaining momentum not only in companies but even in the banking industry which are determined to utilize it properly. This research critically reviews the literature relating to the SISP in Banking Sector. This paper aims to focus on the aspects of strategic planning system as it is applied in the banking sector in general. A case study is presented for Riyadh Bank to investigate their strategic planning.

References

Index Terms

Computer Science Information Sciences

Keywords

Information Systems strategy, Information Technology, Banking sector, SISP