Abstract

Human emotions are outcome of the subjective evaluation of events that occur in the environment. There are various affect theories in psychology to understand human emotion. To make Human-Computer-Interaction (HCI) intelligent, affect theory are to be incorporated. In this paper, discussion of various affect theories and affect computation models have been presented.

References

17. Affective Computing, Aaron Sloman, reviewer; AI Magazine, Spring 1999, pp. 127-137

Index Terms
Computer Science Pattern Recognition

Keywords
Emotion detection from text, emotion detection approaches