Abstract

Biometrics refers to identify an individual, based on human’ physiological or behavioral characteristics. Many unimodal biometric systems exist, but often has limitations due to sensitivity to noise, data quality, spoofy attack etc. Multimodal biometric system evaluates some of the problem by providing multiple biometric features of same identity. This system helps to achieve an increased performance that may not be possible by using single biometric indicator.

References

Multimodal Biometrics: An Enhanced Authentication Technique

6. Arun Ross and Anil K. Jain Multimodal Biometrics: An Overview

Index Terms

Computer Science
Security
Keywords

Traditional method, Biometrics, Unimodal system, Multimodal biometrics, Biometrics traits