Abstract

CVRDE Employees were finding it difficult to obtain Daily Orders Part I information by searching the relevant matter through bounded hard copies. Similarly, Establishment found difficulties in generating more than 100 copies of each Daily Orders Part I and distributes the same to each section within the stipulated time [10]. Hence, a web based new system is developed with search facility. This system eliminates the difficulties of accessibility and scalability in the existing business process.

References

- Brno Lowagie ,iText in Action CREATING AND MANIPULATING PDF. , Manning Publications Co.
- Abraham Silberschts,Henry F. Korth,S. Sudarshan, &quot;Database System
Concepts, fifth edition, Pages 609-631
- Suprotim Agarwal, 51 Tips, Tricks, and Recipes with jQuery and ASP.NET Controls. A2Z Knowledge Visuals Pvt. Ltd.
- Jenkin, T.A., Webster, J., McShane, L. An agenda for Green information technology and systems research. Information and Organization, November 2010
- Bimal Aklesh Kumar, Thin Client Web-Based Campus Information Systems For Fiji National University. International Journal of Software Engineering & Applications (IJSEA), Vol. 2, No. 1, January 2011
- http://docs.jquery.com/Plugins/Calendar
- http://jqueryui.com/demos/dialog/#modal
- http://www.codeproject.com/Articles/13675/Using-C-for-Inserting-CLOB-Data-in-Oracle
Index Terms

Computer Science

Information Systems

Keywords

Daily Orders Part I  Oracle  PLSQL  BLOB  CLOB  ASP.NET