Abstract

This paper presents a decoupled control strategy using time-varying sliding surface-based Sliding Mode Controller (SMC) for a multivariable nonlinear system as an Ammonia Reactor system. The decoupled method provides a simple way to achieve asymptotic stability by dividing the system into three subsystems. Simulation results are presented for SMC comparing with a traditional PID controller. Then, the system is subjected to temperature disturbance to demonstrate the effectiveness and robustness of the controller.
References

Index Terms

Computer Science

Control Systems

Keywords

Sliding Mode Controller  Ammonia Reactor  Decoupled system  PID controller