Abstract

This paper presents the experimental comparison of fourteen stereo matching algorithms in variant illumination conditions. Different adaptations of global and local stereo matching techniques are chosen for evaluation. The variant strength and weakness of the chosen correspondence algorithms are explored by employing the methodology of the prediction error strategy. The algorithms are gauged on the basis of their performance on real-world data sets taken in various indoor lighting conditions and at different times of the day.

References

www.middlebury.edu/stereo

Stefano Mattoccia, Simone Giardino, and Andrea Gambini. Accurate and Efficient Cost Aggregation Strategy for Stereo Correspondence Based on Approximated Joint Bilateral Filtering in Asian Conference on Computer Vision (ACCV2009), September 23-27, 2009, Xi’an, China.

Vladimir Kolmogorov, Ramin Zabih "Computing Visual Stereo correspondence with occlusions via Graph Cuts; 2004"

Andreas Klaus, Mario Sormann and Konrad Karner. Segment-Based Stereo Matching Using Belief Propagation and a Self-Adapting Dissimilarity Measure in 18th International Investigating the performance of Correspondence Algorithms in Vision based Driver-assistance in Indoor Environment

Conference on Pattern Recognition (ICPR'06)

Index Terms
Computer Science Algorithms

Keywords
Performance Indoor Lighting Correspondence Algorithms