Abstract

Peer to peer (P2P) systems are autonomous and decentralized systems with a form of distributed computing. Hence each peer in the network is heterogeneous and is not fully reliable. In this paper it has been tried to estimate the trustworthiness of each peer in the network using Mamdani Fuzzy Inference Systems. For estimating the trust only some of the parameters are considered, namely - Capability, Reliability, Availability and Integrity.

References

- K. Aberer and Z. Despotovic, 2001, Managing trust in a peer-to-peer information system.
- Sabater and C. Sierra, Artif, 2005 Review on computational trust and reputation models.
- L. Kagal, T. Finin, and A. Joshi, 2002 Developing secure agent systems using delegation based trust management.
- K. Aberer and Z. Despotovic, 2001 Managing trust in a peer-2-peer information system, ACM.
- Huaiqing Lin, Xuezhi Wu, Haitao Lin, 2009 Hierarchical fuzzy trust management for peer to peer network, International Colloquium on computing communication control and management, IEEE.

Index Terms

Computer Science

Communications

Keywords

Trust  P2P  Mamdani FIS