Abstract

Inspite of many advancements in multihop multiradio Wireless Mesh Network, it experiences frequent link failures because of increasing bandwidth demand, channel interference, etc. The Autonomous Reconfiguration System (ARS) presented in this paper helps Wireless Mesh Network to overcome such failures, thereby improving the performance of Wireless Mesh Network. ARS passively monitors the network and checks link quality, in case of failures it generates reconfiguration plan and forwards it to neighboring nodes.

References

Improving Performance of Wireless Mesh Networks

Index Terms

Computer Science

Wireless
Keywords
Autonomous Reconfigurable System  multiradio Wireless Mesh Network  Wireless Link Failure